Teenage girls blamed in brick-throwing attack

Caught. Five teenage girls are believed to have attacked three Temple students on March 21, hitting one with a brick.

Police have in custody five teenage girls who identified themselves as a "flash mob," according to a witness, before going on to allegedly attack three female Temple students, striking one of them in the face with a brick, detectives announced Tuesday afternoon.

The 15-year-old girl who allegedly hit a 19-year-old female in the face with a brick on Friday around 6 p.m. near 17th and West Norris streets was expected to be charged with aggravated assault, Central Detectives Capt. Frank Banford said.

The same group of teenagers is believed to be responsible for two other assaults that same day. One involved allegedly punching a female Temple student in the face at 17th Street and Cecil B. Moore Avenue; this was previously reported. The other was a previously unreported attack on another female Temple student at 17th and Willington streets.

This third assault also allegedly involved the student being punched in the face. She went to the hospital and reported the incident to police days later.

Banford said detectives found a witness who saw the girls running down Willington. They reportedly yelled to the witness, "You wanna get in on the flash mob?" as they passed just prior to the brick attack.

After the three attacks, the females boarded a southbound Route 2 bus.

Banford said that out of the five teens in custody, who range in age from 14 to 17, four will likely be charged in the assaults, and one will only be considered a witness.

At least two of the girls turned themselves in after surveillance video was released to news media. Police are still seeking two more teenage girls from the group.

Fatherly Love. Nutter and Co. make pitch to host pope in 2015

Mayor Michael Nutter made his case on Tuesday in Rome for Pope Francis to visit Philadelphia next year.

Nutter, who made the trip with Gov. Tom Corbett and Archbishop Charles Chaput, pitched the Pontifical Council on the idea of bringing the pope to Philadelphia for the 2015 World Meeting of Families.

While popes have attended five of the last seven World Meetings of Families, there is no guarantee that Pope Francis will visit Philadelphia.

The decision isn't expected until next year.

In February 2013, the Vatican confirmed that the City of Brotherly Love would host the 2015 event, which will be the first time it is held in the United States.

The event, which is scheduled for Sept. 22-27, is a collection of workshops and conferences for Catholics to discuss contemporary family life and ways to strengthen it.

Established by Pope John Paul II in 1994, the event is held every three years. METRO

City will replace paramedics on units with EMTs

Resources. The union says the new plan will decrease the level of care.

The firefighters union and the city are at odds over the distribution of emergency medical services resources.

The Nutter administration will introduce a plan at the Civil Service hearing Wednesday to remove one paramedic from every medic unit and replace him or her with an EMT.

Philadelphia Firefighters and Paramedics Union Local 22 officials called it a cost-cutting move. Joe Schulle, president of Local 22, said paramedics must graduate an intense two-year training program. EMTs only need to attend a 10-week training course.

David Gallagher, deputy commissioner of the city's EMS, said the changeover is part of a new deployment plan.

He said five SUVs will be helmed by supervisors that can be used as a floating backup. He said it's a move designed to spread out the city's resources.

Response

Nutter's spokesman Mark McDonald said state law does not require two paramedics in a unit.

- "The firefighters' union members get overtime for serving as EMTs on the medic units. And very often, the firefighter who replaces the EMT on the engine or ladder is also getting overtime. In many instances, when a firefighter EMT is serving on a medic unit, there are two instances of overtime being paid."

Man's trial starts in beating death of 3-year-old boy

Pain. The father of a toddler killed by his mother's boyfriend testified Tuesday in the suspect's murder trial.

Jason Larkin, 28, of Northeast Philadelphia, the father of Jason Larkin Jr., described his son on Tuesday as "an easygoing little boy" who "never liked to be alone, ever."

Larkin testified that on Friday, Jan. 14, 2011, around 9 a.m., the last time he saw his son alive, he dropped the boy off in Roxborough with his ex-girlfriend Daniela Gonzalez, the boy's mother.

He testified that he dressed the boy that morning and that Jason Jr. had no injuries or bruises at that time.

In the early morning hours of Jan. 15, Gonzalez' boyfriend, Joseph Zysk, struck 40-pound, 3-foot-tall Jason in the side multiple times. The blows reportedly punctured Jason's liver and caused internal bleeding, which killed the child.

Defense attorney Evan Hughes is not contesting that Zysk delivered the killing blow, but he urged the jury during his opening statement on Tuesday to convict Zysk of involuntary manslaughter, not third-degree murder.

"That's not a monster right there," Hughes said, pointing at Zysk. "That's a good man who unfortunately made a horrible, horrible mistake."

But prosecutor Jack O'Neill pointed out that Zysk admitted to police that he killed Jason Jr.

"He admitted to what he did," O'Neill said during his opening statement. "Whatever it was that was making him so frustrated and angry, he took it out on that little kid."

Murder charges

The 3-year-old baby was killed by several blows to the side.

- A paramedic who responded to the crime scene testified Tuesday that Jason Jr.'s abdomen was "swollen," describing it as "rigid, hard to the touch."
- Medical examiners found internal bleeding from his liver caused the boy's death.

Chinese families clash with the police

Ire. Malaysia's response has enraged relatives of the 150-plus Chinese passengers.

Dozens of angry relatives of passengers on a lost Malaysian jetliner clashed with police in Beijing on Tuesday, accusing the Southeast Asian country of "delays and deception" a day after it confirmed the plane crashed in remote seas off Australia.

The relatives' grief and anger was unleashed on Monday night after Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak announced that Flight MH370 had crashed in the southern Indian Ocean.

Citing satellite-data analysis by British firm Inmarsat, he said there was now no doubt that the Boeing jet came down in the ocean in one of the most remote places on Earth — an implicit admission that all 239 people on board died. REUTERS

Russia and the West drew a tentative line under the Ukraine crisis on Tuesday after President Barack Obama and his allies agreed to hold off on more damaging economic sanctions unless Moscow goes beyond the seizure of Crimea.

Snooping. Obama says US needs to win back trust after NSA spying

Obama made some decisions about changes to the NSA programs in January, including a ban on eavesdropping on the leaders of friendly or allied nations. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama said on Tuesday that U.S. intelligence agencies were not snooping on ordinary citizens, but admitted it would take time to win back the trust of European governments and people after revelations of extensive U.S. surveillance.

Former intelligence contractor Edward Snowden's disclosures about the sweep of the National Security Agency's monitoring activities triggered a national debate over privacy rights but also damaged relations with some European governments.

Obama said one of the aims of his trip to Europe this week was to reassure allies that he was acting to meet their concerns by limiting the scope of data-gathering.

"I am confident that everybody in our intelligence agencies operates in the best of intentions and is not snooping into the privacy of ordinary Dutch, German, French or American citizens," Obama said after a nuclear security summit.

However, Obama said he recognized that "because of these revelations, there is a process that is taking place where we have to win back the trust, not just of governments, but more importantly of ordinary citizens, and that is not going to happen overnight." REUTERS

Quoted

"There is a danger because of these new technologies that at some point it could be abused, and that is why I initiated a broad-based review."

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled on Tuesday that taxes are due for Social Security and Medicare on severance packages paid to workers who are laid off involuntarily, overturning a lower court ruling that could have led to a wave of payroll tax refund requests from U.S. businesses.

In a win for the Obama administration and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service, the court voted 8-0 that Quality Stores Inc., a defunct retailer, and its employees are not entitled to tax refunds totaling about $1 million. REUTERS

Rescuers scour mudslide rubble, expect rise in toll

Search. Using dogs, earth-moving equipment and aircraft, rescuers failed to find anyone early on Tuesday.

A destroyed house sits on Highway 530 next to mile marker 37 near Arlington, Wash. / GETTY IMAGES

Rescue workers sifted through mucky rubble Tuesday amid dwindling hopes of finding any more survivors from among scores of people still missing from a devastating weekend mudslide in Washington state that killed at least 14.

About a dozen workers kept up the search overnight for as many as 176 people who have been reported missing since a rain-soaked hillside collapsed on Saturday morning, swallowing dozens of homes near Oso, Snohomish County Executive John Lovick said.

Quoted

"Family members are grieving, trying to focus on finding missing loved ones or working through the process of rebuilding what was lost."
Inslee

Compounding their sense of urgency was a fear of flooding as water levels rose behind a crude dam of mud and rubble that had been dumped into the North Fork of the Stillaguamish River by the slide in an area along State Route 530, about 55 miles northeast of Seattle.

Authorities were hoping the number of people listed as missing would decline as they had perhaps been double-counted or had been slow to alert family and officials about their whereabouts.

"This is an extremely difficult and emotional time for the families and friends of those impacted by the Oso mudslide," Washington state Gov. Jay Inslee said in a statement.

‘Scandal’ star and Judge Joe Brown are fighting the law

COLUMBUS SHORT AKA: HARRISON WRIGHT

Today in “Men Behaving Badly,” we have “gladiator” Columbus Short and Judge Joe Brown getting in all sorts of trouble.

First up: Short, who portrays the dapperly dressed Harrison Wright on “Scandal,” seems to have gotten into a wee bar fight on March 15 in Los Angeles, according to TMZ.com. The fight went the way most bar fights do — words were exchanged, egos were harmed — and then Short punched a guy, breaking his nose and rendering him unconscious. Cops are currently investigating.

This isn’t the first time Short has gotten in trouble using his fists. TMZ.com reports he punched a fellow gymgoer in the face after an altercation in 2010, knocking several teeth out. Gladiator, indeed.

Meanwhile, TV’s Judge Joe Brown, who should really know better, was sentenced to a five-day jail stay on a contempt of court charge issued by a Tennessee judge Monday, according to a court spokesman. Brown, who was representing a client, became “pretty raucous” and “challenged the authority” of Magistrate Harold Horne, another judge told CNN. After that, the world’s best mug shot, above, was taken.

Paltrow and Martin separating

After more than 10 years of marriage, Gwyneth Paltrow and Chris Martin are calling it quits.

Paltrow announced on her website, Goop, that the two have decided on a “conscious uncoupling.” The site crashed when we visited, but we took a screenshot like the investigative journalists we are.

The couple wrote in their statement:

“It is with hearts full of sadness that we have decided to separate. We have been working hard for well over a year, some of it together, some of it separated, to see what might have been possible between us, and we have come to the conclusion that while we love each other very much we will remain separate. We are, however, and always will be a family, and in many ways we are closer than we have ever been. We are parents first and foremost, to two incredibly wonderful children and we ask for their and our space and privacy to be respected at this difficult time. We have always conducted our relationship privately, and we hope that as we consciously uncouple and coparent, we will be able to continue in the same manner.

Love,
Gwyneth & Chris”

Talking points

Swift’s ‘strange personality’

Taylor Swift is reportedly taking a break from the dating scene and her handlers couldn’t be more thrilled, according to Radar Online. “Taylor’s advisers are tired of setting her up on dates only to have her strange personality scare men away,” a source says. “Taylor is almost impossible to find dates for because of the nature of her music, which focuses heavily on heartbreak and ex-boyfriends. None of the guys she shows interest in want to be the subject of a mean song six months down the road or be painted the bad guy, so Taylor’s team want her to take a break from boys.”

Hudson tries to save relationship

Kate Hudson and fiance Matthew Bellamy have reportedly been doing everything they can to salvage their relationship, according to E! News. “They had been in a rough patch and things weren’t going well,” a source says of the couple. “They’ve been to counseling and decided they both would like to stay together for now.”

Interview. Jim Broadbent had a blast shooting the grumpy picture "Le Week-End."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

If you're casting actors to play a couple who've been together for 30 years, it can't hurt to go with people who have already played husband and wife. The new dramedy "Le Week-End," about a longtime pair trying to recreate their honeymoon via a Parisian getaway, stars Jim Broadbent and Lindsay Duncan, who already played Lord and Lady Longford in the 2006 English miniseries "Longford." Not that their relationship in that show was anything like the one in "Le Week-End."

"That wasn't so much about the relationship," Broadbent says from Lincolnshire, "but it was enough that we learned we got on and were on the same wavelength. We were pretty well-cast."

In this film, their characters are not happily wed. Nick is a bit of a doormat; a once academic star who never amounted to much. His wife, Duncan's Meg, has largely fallen out of love with him, and rarely misses an opportunity to dress him down.

"It's not a reflection of my marriage," Broadbent says with a warm laugh. (He's been married to painter and former theater designer Anastasia Lewis since 1987.) But he points out that not all is bleak for the on-screen duo. They still get along enough that you're not rooting for a split. "It was their shared humor and enjoyment of each other's company that drew me to it."

Still, it's not too fuzzy. "It isn't sentimental about the long-standing relationship. It's a tricky thing, to keep going for 30 years. God knows how long it will go on after the film ends," he says.

The film is also brutally honest about Nick's vocational failures. "I've known people like him," Broadbent says. "He was charming in his teen years, in his early 20s. But his promise hasn't been fulfilled. He's bright enough to be honest about it. She's very honest as well, and while she laughs with him about it, she's sometimes hurtful.

"I like that. They're open in that way."

The actual filming was the opposite of the bitterness that's often on screen. "The wife came over and we had a little apartment. We had a very light crew. We would film in a small restaurant. ... The whole thing was a delight."

Remembered roles

Potter-heads

Broadbent has spent his career mixing it up between small pictures, big pictures and those made by iconoclasts like Mike Leigh and Terry Gilliam. He won Best Supporting Oscar as novelist Iris Murdoch's husband in "Iris," but he's probably known best as Horace Slughorn in two of the "Harry Potter" films. (He was also Bridget Jones' dad and the emcee in "Moulin Rouge!")

When asked if he's pestered by Potter-heads the worldwide, he says, "No, not really. It's never really intrusive. It's usually a delight. It was probably a bit of a sea change in a way, in that many, many millions of people actually saw a film I was in."

Billy Crudup plays a cop whose brother (Clive Owen) is a crook in "Blood Ties." / GETTY IMAGES

BILLY CRUDUP

The actor talks learning things for movies and then instantly forgetting them.

ONE GOOD COP

In "Blood Ties," Billy Crudup is in a rare position for an actor, starring in a remake while being directed by the actor who played his role in the original. The film, a remake of the 2008 French crime saga "Rivals," is directed by Guillaume Canet ("Tell No One"), who cast the Tony winner and "Almost Famous" star as a good cop whose brother (Clive Owen) is a bad criminal.

Did you watch the original?
No. I still haven't. I don't like to watch films typically as a way of referencing material I'm about to do. I'm doing a play right now ["Waiting for Godot"], and there have been many productions of it before that I could have accessed. I like staying away from that. You want to create the world with the people you're telling the story with.

Let the Weight Be Over!
For years, I would begin each day telling myself, "Today is the day I start my diet," and I would end each day berating myself over my lack of self-control with food. I would always assure myself by saying "I will do better tomorrow," but tomorrow never came, and I continued in a downward spiral! Plagued with hypertension, high cholesterol, sleep apnea, acid reflux disease, and an A1C value that had me knocking on diabetes' doorstep, I carried my weight with a smile – but behind that smile was genuine suffering.
BEFORE
"4 years and 86 lbs. after surgery, and I am the happiest and healthiest I have been in years!" –Jeanette
After gaining weight to the tune of 264 pounds, I decided to get real about my issues with food and my weight! I contacted the Center for Surgical Weight Loss at Hahnemann University Hospital and I never looked back.
Surgery was only the first step in my weight loss journey. I continue to renew my commitment daily by making proper food choices, exercising, and leading an active lifestyle. In fact, shortly after surgery, I took up Zumba. I loved it so much I have became a certified Zumba instructor!
I can honestly say that surgery helped me change my life!

You're also playing the role Canet played in the original. How did he handle that?
He was not territorial. He could not have been less concerned with his own pervious version of it. He really was adamant about Clive and I creating our own version of it. At the same time he had a very clear sense of how he wanted to tell the story cinematically. I admired that, particularly as English is his second language. He's more articulate in his second language than I am in my first. It's not even close.

What was difficult about preparing for this role?
The gun work. I haven't had extensive experience with firearms. And needless to say if you're going to play a police officer who has to handle guns, you don't want that to be a distraction for the audience. It turns out the official way in which police departments approach using firearms has changed over the years — even a handgun. We had to hold the gun in a way that was right for the time, rather than they are right now. Back then you held it cupped under the hand. Now it's [holds gun with both hands level].

Back in time

What about getting into the '70s vibe?

I have this amazing picture. Once I grew my mustache and grew my hair out and put on those suits, it reminded me of a picture in my old scrapbooks. And it turned out I looked exactly like my dad. I have a picture of me and my dad from 1972 — it's staggering, the resemblance.

Owen and Crudup are brothers in the film. / LE GRISBI PRODUCTIONS

Quoted

"One reason I was interested in this was those movies hold a special place in my heart. All of that goes out the window once you start working on the material itself. I suppose there's some actors who'd think, "I'm going to walk like Gene Hackman in 'The French Connection!'" I'm not smart enough to do that."
Crudup, on remakes

One perk of acting is you get to learn things you'd never think to learn.
Every time I learn some kind of discipline I get really into it. Five minutes later it's gone, onto the next thing. Sometimes that really sucks. I did a film that [William H.] Macy directed called "Rudderless" where I play the guitar. And I played the guitar in something a long time ago ["Almost Famous"] and haven't played much since then. So I had to re-learn the guitar for this, and got really into it again, and then as soon as it's over I stopped playing.

Breaking down 'Bleed'

You don't need to speak the language of modern dance to appreciate Tere O'Connor's "Bleed." / COURTESY OF TERE O'CONNOR DANCE

Choreography. The acclaimed show dances into Philly. Here's a primer.

For the lay audience member, insider descriptions of famed New York choreographer Tere O'Connor's methods can feel somewhat distancing. Check out his process blog for "Bleed" — opening this weekend at FringeArts — and you'll soon encounter references to "temporal constellations" and the "choreographic terrain."

But there is no need to feel intimidated. His dances are intended to bring joy to all, especially those not steeped in the language of modern dance. In fact, he's not interested in most of the usual assumptions about the art form; our inner lives are far too complex for those old tropes.

"I'm looking for a kind of replication of consciousness, which includes the full expression of what goes on in a mind," says O'Connor, from the University of Illinois, where he teaches. "There are shards of stories, and aesthetic moments, and emotional tones — all the kinds of things that are inside one person. So I'm not interested in finding the most important one and creating a theme. I want to find out how they swim together."

When "Bleed" opened last December at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, it received rave reviews, most notably from the New York Times. The hourlong piece is actually based on three of O'Connor's previous works. It's an exploration of how movement lives in our minds and our bodies; a muscle memory of sorts. How does one idea or movement bleed into the next?

"Whenever I'm working [on a dance], I'm always fascinated by how information gets ghosted from one dance to another; and since I'm not looking for a narrative in my dances, I really notice the tone that's created from one step to the next, or even one dance to the next," he explains.

O'Connor's dances are complex, but that doesn't mean they're not accessible. In his opinion, inner complexity is the norm of every contemporary person's experience. "I think we savor the pragmatic over the ambiguous too often," he says, "and I don't have to point to anything other than the state of the world right now to prove that this might be the wrong direction. … So the kind of polar opposite dogma that people are engaged in might be somewhat alleviated by looking at things with complexity."

New for spring

Benjamin Moore just released 23 new soothing colors, including Breath of Fresh Air and Lavender Mint. View the shades online at BenjaminMoore.com.

You don't have to paint the walls to have fun with color. / BENJAMIN MOORE, PINTEREST

Creative ways to use color in small spaces

Decor. Make over your apartment with subtle changes that have a big impact.

The easiest way to turn your apartment into a home is with paint. If you don't want to paint the whole room, there are small, noncommittal ways to use color. Keep reading for three ideas anyone can use — even if you've never painted before.

Embrace your makeshift walls

You know how city living is: Sometimes your apartment doesn't come with the walls you need, so you have to use a divider to separate your bedroom from the living room, or create a second bedroom. But dividers are actually the perfect opportunity to inject a little color into your home. Andrea Mango, a member of the color and design team at Benjamin Moore, says it's the perfect way to use a bright or dark color without painting the whole room a bold hue.

"You can make it more of a focal point that is going to make the room more interesting by painting it a bright, fun color inspired by something else going on in the room, such as a window treatment or accessories you have on your table," Mango says.

For the bedroom

Brighten up one wall

"People always want to repaint their bedroom when they get new bedding," Mango says. To avoid making your accent wall look too matchy-matchy, she says you don't have to pick an exact color in the bedding. "You can pick a color that's in the family. So if you have a comforter with blue in it, the walls don't have to be that exact blue. Or you can think about a complementary color."

But the most important part of choosing paint colors is to pick ones you like. "It's all about personal preference," Mango says. "There are no rules."

Paint the back of your shelves

The creative team at Benjamin Moore have another genius way to inject a little color into your home: Paint the back of shelving units, bookshelves or even kitchen cabinets. Take off those dull wooden cabinet doors, paint the backs of your cabinets and then insert clear cabinet doors so the color still shows through. Repeat the color in a couple places throughout the room, such as on a vase or picture frame.

Beauty. Find out how to care for your skin when it's a polar vortex one day and sunny on the next

One day it's snowing and the next it's 50 degrees out, and your skin is suffering as a result. "This type of weather wreaks havoc on our skin," says Dr. Doris Day, a clinical assistant professor of dermatology at New York University Langone Medical Center. "It's hard to recover because the weather changes so quickly, even sometimes from morning to afternoon." Day says the key is protecting against the worst of the harsh elements — biting wind and bitter cold — while still wearing SPF to protect skin from the sun. Here, she shares more helpful tips.

With a little moisturizing, your skin will glow even on the most bitter winter days. / WAVEBREAK

Dress in layers

"If you dress only for the cold and then it warms up, or you go inside where it's warm and you start sweating, that change in temperature can be stressful on your skin," Day says. Dressing in layers you can put on and take off easily keeps your core body temperature stable, preventing skin freak-outs.

Limit hot showers

When it's freezing out, a hot shower is the ultimate indulgence. Unfortunately, they aren't so great for your skin. "A hot shower dries out your skin and takes out your natural oils, which isn't healthy," Day says. Her advice is to stick with warm showers instead of boiling hot ones and to moisturize when you get out, while your skin is damp. EMILY LAURENCE

Year-round tip

Don't forget your lips

Keep a lip balm in your pocket or bag at all times because it protects your lips no matter what the weather is like. As Day points out, your lips can get windburned or sunburned, so a lip balm with SPF is always a good idea.

Gaming. Sony is developing a PlayStation worn on your face

It's obvious that the only reason any of us got into this technology thing is to one day experience the glory of something like the "Star Trek" holodeck. For years, it seemed as though that kind of fully immersive virtual reality experience would happen long after we had passed from this Earth. But that might not be the case! VR eyewear devices are becoming all the rage. First the Oculus Rift brought this kind of technology to the PC, and now Sony is bringing it to the PS4.

It's currently called Project Morpheus, though that won't be the final name. Here's how it works: Slip the device onto your head, and you are transported into a virtual world. Move your head in real life and your avatar moves its head, adjusting your vision.

There is also an external camera that tracks your hand movements, so you could be holding a virtual sword or a slice of pizza or something.

Early reports indicate that the device works surprisingly well. Some of the demos shown had people storming a medieval castle and hanging out underwater with a bunch of sharks. Sounds cool, right? Unfortunately, it won't be coming to stores until 2015 at the earliest.

More women than men at risk for obesity-fueled depression

Location of study: India
Study subjects: Almost 2,000 obese adults
Results: It's well established that obesity leads to a host of physical health issues. But what role does obesity play when it comes to mental health? A recent Indian study found that obese women are more likely to develop depression when compared to obese men.
Significance: While obese men were two times as likely to be depressed as men who were not obese, the numbers were much different among women. In fact, obese women were found to be 39 times more likely to suffer from depression when compared to women of normal weight.

Botox helps asthma sufferers

Location of study: Australia
Study subjects: 11 patients with treatment-resistant asthma and abnormal vocal cord movement
Results: Study participants received a total of 24 unilateral vocal cord injections of Botox, which caused temporary muscle paralysis. Subject response was then assessed using asthma control test scores and CT imaging of the vocal cords. The study found that Botox injected to one vocal cord resulted in improved asthma control and reduced narrowing of the upper airway.
Significance: For many asthma patients, vocal cord dysfunction is a debilitating condition that causes difficulty breathing and muscle spasms. Botox injections could represent a major step forward in treatment.

Study

The Harvard School of Public Health says that pizza and cheese are the biggest saturated fat food sources in the U.S. diet. / COLOURBOX

Are saturated fats the enemy?

Location of study: Worldwide
Study subjects: People in 27 clinical trials and 49 population studies
Results: The Annals of Internal Medicine says that comprehensive research hasn't found evidence to clearly support a low consumption of saturated fats.
Significance: Saturated fat may have more of a neutralizing effect when it comes to heart disease.

ASTHMA, AND WHAT WORKS TO TREAT IT

The question

I've been coughing when I go out in the cold. Could this be asthma?

One in 12 American adults has asthma, according to the CDC. But there are many variables, and not everyone has the same symptoms or triggers.

Asthma is an inflammatory condition affecting the bronchial tubes in the lungs, which may cause wheezing, coughing or increased mucus production, and chest tightness or shortness of breath. Exacerbations — asthma attacks — can be triggered by a number of things, like environmental substances, occupational irritants, tobacco smoke, air pollution, exercise, respiratory infections, stress, acid reflux, medications and cold air. It is not totally clear what physiological factors cause some people to have asthma while others don't.

Asthma can be diagnosed by your doctor or a pulmonary specialist. Once your doctor diagnoses you and identifies your triggers, he or she will work to customize your treatment, often by trial and error. There are a few categories of drugs that may be used, including:

Bronchodilators: These are usually in the form of aerosol canisters or vapor nebulizers that deliver the medication directly to the lungs. You inhale a puff of the drug.

Prevent asthma attacks by identifying and avoiding triggers. / STOCKBYTE

Corticosteroids: These anti-inflammatory substances can be delivered via inhalation, orally or intravenous injection. They modify the body's response to the asthma triggers by reducing the effects of various chemicals released at the cellular level.

Leukotriene modifiers: These are orally administered and block the release of substances that are the chemical building blocks of inflammation, in effect stopping inflammation before it can begin.

Allergy relievers: Antihistamines, decongestants and allergy shots may help to prevent or relieve the effects of environmental or seasonal allergies that contribute to asthma attacks.

Print less, save the world

Carbon emissions have been the buzzwords now for years, but until very recently, very little has happened. Companies use more energy and have a larger carbon footprint than many households put together. We need to lower the footprint of the human race as a whole. This means that we have to start with the biggest culprits. If we don't do something soon, it will simply be too late. We need you to help. Never print an email unless it's completely crucial. It starts with your desk, spreads to your office, spills to the company, then changes the world. One person can make a difference.

Buying cheap is a US hobby

Re: 'Hobby Lobby should be consistent' (Metro, March 25)
What's a merchant to do? The reason that retailers such as Hobby Lobby sell "Made in China" merchandise is that we Americans buy it! Given the choice between a domestic item and a comparable, lower-priced, "Made in China" item, Americans choose the lower price. Who supports the "bad guys"? Look in the mirror.

Phillies delay call on Abreu

The Phillies need bench help — with several players on the disabled list heading into opener — and have determined they also need more time to decide Bobby Abreu's fate. Instead of Wednesday, the team will decide by Sunday whether the 40-year-old will make the team.

Flyers look to keep pace with Rangers in division

NHL. The Flyers are a point behind the Rangers and head to New York Wednesday night looking to jump ahead of them.

The Rangers have won the last seven home games against Philadelphia dating back to Feb. 20, 2011. / GETTY IMAGES

While you'll never get them to admit it, here's a fact of NHL life: Not all two points are created equal.

No, you don't get extra credit for beating the first place Penguins or Bruins rather than last place Edmonton or Nashville. But don't believe there's not a psychological effect if not a tangible difference. The same applies when facing teams in your own division, especially since the two points you get are two points the opposition doesn't get — or one point should it come down to overtime or a shootout.

Which brings us to the Flyers and Rangers Wednesday at the Garden, where Philadelphia has come up empty its last seven trips, stretching back to February 2011. During that span they've been outscored a mind boggling 28-8, including a 4-1 loss on Jan. 12 when former Flyers enforcer Dan Carcillo scored early to jump-start his new team and his old one never recovered.

With the two teams seemingly headed on a first-round playoff collision course, where home ice could make the difference, this one takes on even greater significance. The Rangers' 4-3 come-from-behind overtime win over Phoenix Monday, coupled with the Flyers' 3-2 loss to the Kings, has bumped Broadway's team a point over Broad Street's into second place in the Metropolitan.

But keep in mind regardless of what happens in this one, the Flyers still hold two games in hand. Of course, that would be a lot more comforting — not to mention confidence boosting for the postseason — if they can win or at least salvage a point getting it to overtime Wednesday.

"It's a tough building to play in, MSG," Scott Hartnell said. "They're playing good hockey as well so we're going to have our hands full. We're going to need big efforts from our best players and we need to play a clean game."

After Wednesday night the Flyers take on Toronto Friday, then the Atlantic Division-leading Bruins at home in a Sunday matinee, before finishing with five of their last eight on the road. But as the battle for playoff positioning moves into the homestretch, the intensity will only continue to ratchet up.

Quoted

"We've got to make sure that we are ready to play and it's going to be a great game." Jake Voracek

NCAA. Villanova's Bell wins Big 5 honor as Player of the Year

James Bell averaged over 14 points per game last year. / GETTY IMAGES

After one of the best regular seasons in recent memory for the Wildcats, it comes as no surprise that Villanova's James Bell won Big 5 Player of the Year for the Big 5 and Big East regular season champions.

Bell also took most improved player honors.

Villanova head coach Jay Wright won coach of the year in the Big 5, St. Joseph's DeAndre' Bembry won rookie of the year and Temple's Jimmy McDonnell was the scholar athlete of the year.

For the women, Penn's Alyssa Baron took top player honors. METRO

Roster woes

Phillies face tough decisions on bench

The Phillies plan to carry six players on their bench this year. Now if only they had six players good enough to play on their bench on their roster.

After the Phillies outrighted Kevin Frandsen, the infielder opted for free agency leaving $900,000 on the table and much-needed depth in Triple-A for the squad.

Kevin Frandsen / GETTY IMAGES

Freddy Galvis is out for a few weeks with MRSA, and the team announced it was releasing Ronny Cedeno. This leaves Reid Brignac and Cesar Hernandez as the only utility infielders remaining on the 40-man roster.

Two other options include Andres Blanco, a light-hitting sure-handed minor leaguer, and Cesar Izturis, who opted out of his contract earlier this week with the Astros.

The rest of the bench will likely include catcher Wil Nieves and outfielders Tony Gwynn Jr., John Mayberry Jr. and possibly Bobby Abreu. All decisions must be made by Sunday. EVAN MACY

Vick speaks out

VICK AND JACKSON HOOKED UP ON 13 TOUCHDOWNS.

Vick has advice for Jackson

If anybody knows about off the field drama, it's former Eagles quarterback and DeSean Jackson teammate Michael Vick.

The newly acquired New York Jet said on SNY's Daily News Live that a change of teams may not be the worst thing in the world for the receiver.

"I think sometimes it takes a change in your life to understand really what needs to happen, and the course that needs to be set," Vick said. "Maybe it's time for a change for DeSean to help him understand the maturation process of his young NFL life and his personal life.

Vick also told the New York media that he expects to be the Jets starting signal caller when the new season arrives.

"I feel like I'm a legitimate starting quarterback in this league," he said. "I feel like I can compete with the best of them."

Jackson says he's staying with Eagles

NFL. Reports say DeSean Jackson could wind up staying in Philly.

The ongoing saga of DeSean Jackson continues, as sources are now stepping back on the inevitability of his departure.

Two separate instances Tuesday inferred that the Eagles could retain their top receiver from the 2013 season after all.

A Jackson tweet, sent after a meeting of AFC head coaches at the owners meeting said the following: "Good to Talk to Big Chip Today!! Say or hear what ya want!! The Picture speaks for itself!! Winner ..."

Attached to the tweet was an Instagram photo of Jackson and Eagles head coach Chip Kelly from training camp last season.

Then later Tuesday morning, Philly.com reported that a source close to Jackson said the Eagles coach told the star "don't worry about anything and keep working hard and be ready for camp."

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported that Jackson called several teammates Tuesday to tell them he will be staying in Philly.

Eagles GM Jeffrey Lurie had no comment on Jackson, but Chip Kelly could shed some light when he talks to the media Wednesday morning.

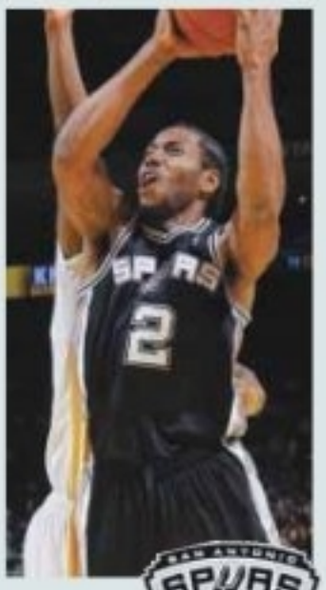
NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1



Spurs (54-16)

What can we say? After weeks and weeks — and weeks — of not giving this team enough credit, the Spurs take the top spot. Their identical home and road records (27-8) prove how mentally tough and fundamentally sound they are. And we know they'll be even better once the playoffs come around.

No. 2

Clippers (50-21)

The Clippers are about to embark on a five-game road trip, including three against playoff teams. It won't be easy for them at 19-16 on the road.

No. 3

Thunder (52-18)

Based on the way Kevin Durant is playing right now, if there's a player in this year's NBA Draft even half as good as he is, it'll be considered a great pick.

No. 4

Rockets (48-22)

The Rockets have distanced themselves from the Blazers, somewhat, and currently hold a 3 1/2-game lead for the No. 4 seed.

No. 5

Heat (48-21)

The Heat have hit a bit of a rough patch. But now they're riding a win over the Blazers into Wednesday's game against the Pacers.

No. 6

Pacers (50-17)

What's going on with the Pacers? (Frantically checks pockets for panic button.) They've lost seven of their last 12 games and lead Miami by two games.

No. 7

Grizzlies (42-28)

After starting the year 15-19, the Grizzlies are 27-9 and now find themselves 2 1/2 games out of the No. 5 seed in the Western Conference. It's been a nice recovery.

No. 8

Warriors (44-27)

They lost to the Spurs without Tim Duncan and Manu Ginobili on Saturday, and have all week to think about it before facing the Grizzlies on Friday.

No. 9

Blazers (45-26)

Portland is one team in the West floundering right now. Their 24-20 conference record is worst among current West playoff teams.

No. 10

Suns (42-29)

With the way Memphis is playing right now, it's looking like the No. 8 seed will be a dogfight between the Suns and the Mavericks.

Healthy Volunteers Needed for Research Study
The UPenn Department of Anesthesiology & Critical Care is looking for healthy, non-obese (BMI < 30) males and females, ages 20-40, to participate in a research study looking at the unconscious brain while under general anesthesia to determine how the brain reconstructs itself after anesthesia. This study randomizes (like a fill of a coin) subjects into two groups: 1. General anesthesia (3.5 hours) and cognitive testing, or 2. Resting period (3.5 hours) and cognitive testing.

Study subjects will have a full history and physical examination prior to the study. All subjects will have a drug test. Women will be required to take a pregnancy test. Subjects will have their "brain waves" monitored while taking cognitive tests before, during, and after anesthesia or resting period.

All subjects will be paid $250 (anesthesia) / $125 (resting) at the completion of the study. There are no expenses to the subject.

To learn more about participating in the study, contact the University of Pennsylvania Department of Anesthesia & Critical Care at 215-573-8209.
